Mosby vs. Daniel.

To the Editor of the Alexandria Gazette:

I have just read the open letter of Major Daniel to Capt. Page McCarty and heartily agree with him in all he says in commendation of the conduct of the southern people during the recent disturbances. Major Daniel himself took a creditable position in sustaining the President in the emergency though it is to be regretted that he tried to impair the credit to which he is entitled by offering a resolution condemning Pullman for not submitting to arbitrators the question whether he should run his works at a loss, or close them. How many employers of labor in Virginia would do such a thing, and why shouldn't Pullman have the same liberty as other people? In attempting to make political capital out of the disorders of the times Major Daniel has sunk the statesman (which his brilliant talents entitle him to be) into a mere party politician. He contrasts the people South with the riotous North and declares that the Coxeyites all come from "the hot-beds of protection." To the doctrine of protection, or what he calls paternalism in government he attributes all the socialistic movements. It is true that Coxey and his followers are from the North; but so far from being protectionists they are just the reverse of it. Henry George, their great apostle (who denounced Cleveland for using U. S. troops to suppress the insurrection), is an avowed free trader, and so are all their representatives in Congress. Peller, Allen, Pence and Company. When Coxey was before the Police Court in Washington Pence volunteered to defend him. Coxey is now a populist candidate for Congress on a free trade platform. Peller offered a resolution in the Senate condemning the President for squelching the rioters, and Major Daniel and most of the other Senators sat down on Peller. Senator Hill opposed the tariff bill that passed the Senate with the income tax, on the ground that it was a "Coxey bill." In 1892 it is understood that Hill, who said "I am a democrat," was Major Daniel's choice for President. I am glad he didn't get him. I think it is shown that there is more affinity between Major Daniel's favorite theories and Coxeyism, than the republican doctrine of protection. Coxey wants the government to issue an unlimited supply of money. Some years ago Major Daniel was a greenbacker (as were most of the Virginia politicians), and it is hard to see the difference between Coxey and a greenbacker. The Coxeyites and populists are all one and the same people. In the recent riots in California the populists were open in their demonstrations of sympathy with the rioters, and so was the leading democratic free trade paper of San Francisco. The platform of the populists is "free trade and free silver." I believe that is Major Daniel's, Chicago, where the riots began, is a democratic city—it is not "the hot bed of protection," but of anarchy. Illinois, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Indiana, and California, where the disturbances were the most serious—all voted either for Cleveland, or Weaver. In some of those States the democrats and populists fused; in the anarchist governors of Illinois, Colorado and Oregon are a product of this coalition. I have never yet heard of a republican and populist fusion. Major Daniel thinks the riots were the results of the teaching of protection. Now, when the insurrection was at its height in Sacramento, Debs telegraphed to his lieutenant there that the demonization of silver was the real cause of the trouble. Major Daniel is both a democrat and a silverite; so is Debs. Before he became an autocrat as head of the A. R. U. Debs was a democratic politician in Indiana. Dan Voorhees will vouch for him. Weaver published a letter in defense of the strikers. Weaver is a free trader silverite; so is Major Daniel. During the riots at the Carnegie iron works in 1892, Senator Palmer, of Illinois (democratic free trader and anarchist), openly avowed his sympathy with the men who were engaged in murder, arson and robbery. He said (like Major Daniel) that protection was the cause of it all. In a certain sense it was, and so was Columbus. If he hadn't discovered America the primal forest would still be where there are now smoking furnaces; and if he had not had a protective tariff there would have been no Carnegie steel works and riots. You may remember that there was an investigation of the condition of the poor Carnegie employees, for whom so much sympathy had been expended, and it was discovered that the leader of the strike lived in more luxury than any one in Alexandria, and that the lower paid wage earner got a larger salary than a circuit judge in Virginia. If there were any natural affinity between the republican doctrine of protection and Coxeyism it is hard to see why all the democratic Governors in the West are Coxeyites, and why it is that the latter always fuse with the democrats. The conservative democrats of Oregon were so much disgusted with this alliance at the last election that they voted the republican ticket.

Then, what about Tillman? That crowd (that banished Wade Hampton) claim to be democratic free traders and silverites. One of their paternal theories, is that it is the duty of the State to furnish the people with whisky. During Grant's administration South Carolina was praying for "local self-government." Well she got it with Tillman—and a civil war too.

Three months ago the State was in a revolution. Governor Tillman's peace officers and deputies had all taken to the woods, and the citizens were hunting them with bloodhounds. The militia were out with cocked guns. There were more free traders killed then than in the railroad riots. South Carolina is certainly not a "hot bed of protection." They all believe in free silver and free trade. It has always voted for Cleveland. It is true that Tillman recently said that if he were elected to the Senate he intended to "stick a pitchfork into his fat ribs." But that was only because Cleveland is not a silverite—other words because Cleveland is better than his party.
